I am using Delphi 7 and i m using a connectivity to an SQLite database. I wanted to have a dailog window when the program is running. How can i implement that? A: Googling your question reveals this: This will show you how to do it on Delphi XE2 (and Embarcadero C++Builder XE2). There is also some information about doing it in Delphi 7 on Pages Monday, June 13, 2011 You Say Tomato 3 yr old stepson got his first job at 3.5 (and his 1st day was yesterday). Two days into his new job he was trained on all aspects of the job and would be doing things by himself. We went to have lunch with his mother and stepfather at an In n Out Burger today. Now as a toddler you can't take a cup and you need to eat in a sit down restaurant, so I made him a cup of yogurt and spoon to eat it with. When he was done I took the spoon to get the bowl. "Gimme back the spoon, I want to do it myself." I explained that he was doing it all by himself and that you can't take the spoon away from a child to get the bowl. "I WANT TO DO IT MYSELF!" He exclaimed. So I let him finish it and give him his bowl. I explained that he can't take the bowl away from me (but he could help me take it from the table) and that I could put it down on the floor for him to eat later. "But I want to eat it right away." He said. What can I say? He's a toddler. It was a "tomato" thing. I gave him a few spoons. "Can I have a few more?" We counted them out and he has 3 spoons left. "Now I have enough for both of us" he informed me. He plopped the bowl in his lap and proceeded to eat his yogurt. So I had my spoon ready when he finished his. I took the bowl to the floor and put it down
