Regards KHuey Q: Avoid adding same data in to the cache I have an Application which needs to read thousands of files from a directory. The content of the files are currently holding different data. I want to avoid reading the same data for each and every operation. So for this I am using the MemoryCache. I am using ConcurrentDictionary to keep the data in the cache and it is working fine. Here is what I am doing for setting the data to the cache. `var response = HttpContext.Current.Cache.Get(fileid) as HttpResponseMessage; if (response == null) { response = Get(fileid); HttpContext.Current.Cache.Add(fileid, response, new CacheDependency(fileid)); }` The above approach was pretty slow. What I am trying to do is I just want to read the file once. If the same data is present in the cache, the old data will be replaced by the new one. I was thinking of creating a method like this.
`public static MemoryCache GetCache(string fileid) { var response = HttpContext.Current.Cache.Get(fileid) as HttpResponseMessage; if (response == null) { response = Get(fileid); HttpContext.Current.Cache.Add(fileid, response, new CacheDependency(fileid)); } return response; }` How can I make this method fast and also avoid adding the same data again in the cache? Any suggestions are welcome. A
