A new study by researchers at North Carolina State University suggests the recent, deadly coronavirus might have been started by wild animals. Specifically, the researchers believe the virus got its start in bats. The researchers are working on a theory that bats are the origin of the virus, which is causing a global pandemic. The coronavirus is called SARS-CoV-2, and it is causing COVID-19. The research is based on the fact that the virus is a close genetic cousin of another virus called MERS, which has infected more than 1,300 people in the Middle East. Both of these viruses are common in bats, and MERS specifically has been traced to camels. Based on the studies of the genetic make-up of the coronavirus and its close relative, Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, believes the coronavirus got its start in bats. "Somebody inadvertently brought the virus to China and it jumped to humans." There is no definitive proof that bats have or did carry the coronavirus
