What's New In?

This is a very simple 'front-end' that allows the user to find and play the notes on the keyboard. The user has to say 'Play me a piece of music' or 'Scan a music sheet'. The software looks for the note on the keyboard corresponding to the note on the sheet music, and plays it for the user. It also generates sound as well, but is optional. It's always worth learning to 'play' the piano as opposed to just'scanning' it. By giving the user an object to play, it makes it a more active, and engaging learning experience. Advanced Training: The program has an advanced level that allows the user to tell the program what note to play. The program can even look for the note, and play it to the user. This is best when you don't know what key the note is in, and need to be helped. Key Recognition Mode: This mode will allow the user to practise in 'key' recognition mode. The notes are played for the user on the keyboard, and they are asked to say 'Key'. If they get the key right, they get a 'clap' sound at the end, if they get it wrong, they get a 'ding' sound. This is a very effective way of practising recognition of keys. Note Recognition Mode: This mode allows the user to practise in 'note' recognition mode. The notes on the sheet music are scanned, and the computer makes the note sounds. If the note is right, then it makes a 'clap' sound at the end, if it's wrong, then it makes a 'ding' sound. If the user wants to hear the note, then they can. The note is played. If they got it right, then they get a 'clap' sound at the end. The user can also'score' out the notes, and the program will report them as they are played correctly or wrongly. This is great for practice, but not for actual playing. Music-Sheet Practice Mode: This is a basic mode that allows the user to scan music sheets. It will recognise the note, but it will not play it. It will instead, allow the user to say 'Record'. The program records the music sheet, and the user can view it in the program. The software will generate a 'click' when the key or note is recorded. This is the simplest way to learn how to play the piano. It's also a great way of reviewing previous practice. I have made modifications to this program over the years. I haven't created an interface for the program, but it is now essentially a GUI front end to the game Pianoman. It should be noted that if you have Pianoman installed on your machine, you
