Parcheesi is the most popular board game in the world. Similar to Backgammon, there is a two-player version, Parcheesi-Go and a one-player version, Parcheesi-Oh. The game is played on a rectangular board, and is traditionally played on an asphalt/concrete surface. The game can also be played on tables, lawn, playgrounds, asphalt/concrete surface, sidewalks, uneven terrain, concrete/concrete surface, pavement/concrete surface, pavement/asphalt surface, grassy areas, hard courts, grassy areas, or even walls. This website is about Parcheesi but it's not just for Parcheesi, it's for all board games that use a chequered board and the same rules. Parcheesi is played on a rectangular board with a chequered board and white, blue, red, and black pieces. The two basic board pieces are the white and black pawns. The white pawn has two squares on the board, each one with a little cross in the middle. The white pawn moves one square in any direction. The black pawn has one square and has a cross in the center, just like the white pawn, but it cannot move in two directions; it must move one square in any one of four directions. The red and blue pieces move two squares in any direction, and the green and yellow pieces move four squares in any direction. To play the game, players each take a turn moving one piece per turn. Each player starts with a hand of 12 pieces, consisting of one white pawn, four red pieces, four blue pieces, and three green pieces. The object of the game is to get three pieces of your color on the board with the least possible number of moves. A single player game involves 3 phases or turns per player, with a mandatory draw to decide who goes first. Each phase is as follows: The white player can move any one piece to any empty space on the board, and the black player must not move in the same turn. If a white player moves into an occupied space, he may choose to move the piece back. The pieces cannot be captured in this turn, and must move to a new square. The white player can move one of the black pieces if one of the white pieces is on a board edge. If the black player moves, he can choose to move the piece back or capture the white piece. If the white player moves on an edge,
