Windows users can create a messenger account to exchange free messages through the Windows Messenger Service, which is an instant messaging platform included by Windows. The messenger accounts can also be used to receive free messages. But sometimes, it is more convenient for the Windows user to view their received messages directly in WinSent Innocenti or other similar applications. The Windows Messenger Service supports the "view received messages" function through the messenger. But it does not enable users to view their sent messages, which makes WinSent Innocenti a valuable tool for Windows users who want to see both sent and received messages in a single application. What
