(AP) — The Latest on a new report detailing how a Russian spy posing as a university professor might have recruited at least one U.S. citizen (all times local): 11:50 a.m. A House panel plans to debate a bill to give the Trump administration new powers to impose sanctions against those who interfere in U.S. elections, even if they're not U.S. citizens. The House Intelligence Committee will take up the bill Wednesday. ADVERTISEMENT U.S. officials last year issued a report saying that the Russian intelligence agency used social media to try to sway the 2016 election. The bill would grant the president the power to impose sanctions against those deemed to be "responsible for significant malicious cyber-enabled activities" that "influence" elections. The authors of the bill say it would also allow the president to sanction people and companies that might be used to interfere in future elections. A separate bill would also allow the Trump administration to impose sanctions on any foreign person or entity that provides "material support" to anyone it considers to be a foreign agent. ___ 10:25 a.m. A House panel will debate a bill that would give the Trump administration new powers to impose sanctions against those who interfere in U.S. elections, even if they're not U.S. citizens. Most Recent Review Very impressed by Sindy's professionalism, friendliness, attention to detail, ability to multi-task, and helpfulness. Highly recommended! (2) Reviews 10/14/2017 I had a fantastic experience with Sindy. I was nervous as my first time ever doing an audio-visual online session. She made the experience a breeze. I had so much fun I have signed up for her spring session. 08/01/2017 Sindy is so patient and accommodating and made the day so easy! She answered all of my questions about the room, and her studio is very comfortable. The photo booth is so convenient and she even took my work laptop to bring into the session. I was nervous before the session about all of the little details, but she kept me relaxed and I found her to be very thorough. I'm so excited to have some new session photos for the next few months!ST.
