What's New in the?

Funduc Software Database Manager Portable is a simple, but efficient, software that can help you open, import, insert and save data from SQLite databases. Advantages: * Simple interface; * Ability to import and export data in several formats; * Customization: you can add data, company name, notes and customers; * Valid in almost all Windows versions (from 95 to present). A torrent is a peer-to-peer (p2p) file sharing technology that uses the concept of BitTorrent, and can work on any computer, without a server. It lets you share files, large or small, without paying monthly fees. It is different from other file sharing services, as it shares files between users directly, rather than uploading them to a server. Software can be divided into two types: single-user software and multi-user software. Multi-user software has been used by businesses since the 1970s. Its first applications allowed companies to share resources, such as accounting and payroll software, which was expensive to purchase individually for each user. Multi-user software has become increasingly complex, and as the technology has advanced, so have multi-user programs, such as groupware. Benefits of multi-user software: * Cost savings - most companies use multi-user software to save money; * Improved efficiency - multi-user software allows shared resources to be used more efficiently; * Easier to install - the company can use a single CD to install all the software for all employees, or smaller groups; * Ability to limit access - multiple users can be allocated different levels of access to confidential information, such as databases; * Increased staff productivity - employees who would otherwise be idle, and yet would like to work, can use multi-user software to find time for their own tasks. Multi-user software requires specialized hardware that has at least two hard drives. One drive must be dedicated to the operating system and applications, while the other drive or drives should be used for data storage. Multi-user software works by recording and backing up data to the drive, instead of installing it on one of the computers. As a result, it is a much more efficient method of software backup and recovery, and it also saves on the cost of extra hard drive space.
