Is there any way that I can execute the loop as many times as I have executions but with a parameter value that can be passed? This is what I have now (I'm using MS SQL Server 2016 and Visual Studio 2017). It is being used to check if a Field we cannot update in our databases contains specific ESN codes. A: You can use Script Component to do that. Then you can add Code behind to your script that will process your input parameter. ScriptComponent can have a string of some sort (or you can even have a parameterized query), and it will not require an input parameter at all. Look up how to access current value of variable in SC script via "UsingScriptComponent" object's "Variable" property. Then you can process the string parameter by your code, just like any other string. On another hand, you can also use Execute SQL Task to execute a sql query with dynamic value, not string. ___('Add Product')?> />
