A: You need to install the RealFlight InterLink driver. It should be a basic plug-and-play install, and the driver will try and download itself automatically. If not it will be in the device manager under the "unrecognized devices" section.

Q: Case insensitive searching in Elasticsearch

Using Elasticsearch I want to be able to perform case insensitive search queries. Currently I use: GET items/document/_search?q=*i* for searching my Index. But this is not case insensitive search, it only "blows up" words like q=**i** q=**I** q=**H** And case in my query affects only query text. Is there any way to get case insensitive search in Elasticsearch? A: No, there is no way to support case insensitive searching with a prefix match query, I suggest to filter out the case in your application. If your data is some text, an appropriate suggester query would be: `POST /items/document/_suggest?suggest=true&q=*.:&suggester=ik_max_length&include_sort=true` for a short, case insensitive match, the best would be to use a

POST /items/document/_suggest?suggest=true&q=*:*&suggester=srch_lc&include_sort=true This would enable you to filter out case sensitive spelling mistakes. Q: Can you use 2 different sips of cereals in the same recipe? I have a recipe, with different grain sips, that I cook in the same pan. I know that I can add two different grains to the same pan, but is this safe? I mean, can I use 2 different sips and still be safe? Or will I get a problem from it? A: The safety issues are pretty obvious: Putting 2 different grains in the same pan is asking for trouble. To get a reasonable amount of grain in the finished product, you need to switch the grain early on. Giving it a quick switch-up means that you have the chance to watch the entire process and see what's happening with an open eye. I would not attempt to do this with 1 type of grain; I would not attempt 570a42141b
