In general, the art of backhoes and hydraulic excavators has advanced rapidly over the past several decades. The basic design of the backhoe has remained quite unchanged since its introduction. However, significant advances have been made in the areas of excavating, lifting, controlling, and transporting a load. To that end, a variety of backhoe attachment devices have been developed in the art. Powered mounting arrangements for backhoes have evolved to enable placement and removal of such attachments to and from a backhoe bucket. Examples of such arrangements can be found in U.S. Pat. Nos. 3,998,526; 4,209,278; 4,353,340; 4,716,773; and 5,005,736. All of these arrangements require the operator to position the attachment on the ground, place the bucket over the attachment, and then pick up the bucket and attachment. U.S. Pat. No. 3,998,526 (1995) discloses a self-elevating skid or sled that is resiliently mounted to a backhoe arm. One of the disadvantages associated with the arrangement disclosed in the '526 patent is the inability to drive the skid and the attachments on it to and from the elevated bucket. An invention that facilitates placement and removal of a load between a backhoe and a vehicle is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,353,340 (1985). In the '340 patent, a lift platform is carried by a wheeled base. A single linkage is mounted on the wheeled base and projects a load cradle to the backhoe bucket. The lift platform is tiltable relative to the wheeled base to facilitate placing the load into the load cradle. The single linkage is pivotally attached at one end to the wheeled base, and at its other end to the load cradle. Therefore, when a load is placed into the cradle, the load cradle must be moved laterally away from the wheeled base to lift the cradle by the linkage from the wheeled base and to enable tilting of the wheeled base relative to the linkage. Another backhoe attachment device that facilitates placement and removal of a load on the backhoe bucket is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,005,736. In the '736 patent, the hydraulic lift arms are pivotally mounted to a wheeled frame. A linear lift cylinder extends through a frame aperture to provide vertical lift movement of the lift arms to raise and lower the

Q: getter and setter in object not working in javascript I am new to object. The getter & setter are not working. I have a class name: `var uri= new uri; uri.setName('nakaam');` Also I have a function to set the attributes and properties: `function setattr(object, attr, value) { if (object[attr] === undefined) { object[attr] = value; } }` I tried to set the attribute in uri object: `console.log(uri.setattr('name', 'nakaam', 'ABC')); console.log(uri.name);` I get this output: Object What is the reason behind this. How to set getters and setters in object? A: A few things: 1) `var uri= new uri;` should be: `var uri = new uri;` 2) `setattr(object, attr, value) {` should be: `setattr(object, attr, value);` 3) You are using a static name of 'name' when you should use the method name like this: `uri.name = 'nakaam';` 4) The name property will be automatically be set if its value is undefined, so you are trying to call a method name on an object. The Drosophila genome sequence reveals that zinc knuckle transcription factors play an important role in developmental processes. The zinc knuckle (ZNF) domain is one of the largest protein families. The Drosophila genome sequence has revealed that the ZNF family comprises between 887 and 1,173 genes. Here, we use our knowledge of sequence diversity within the ZNF family and the availability of the complete genome sequence to investigate the biological functions of the ZNF proteins that it encodes. We present evidence that many ZNF genes function in the early stages of embryogenesis. Using developmental mutants and heat-shock inducible Gal4 lines, we confirm that nine different ZNF proteins are required to establish the embryonic dorsoventral axis, and this role is most probably direct, based on transcriptome-wide analyses. The ZNF domain acts as a protein-protein interaction domain, allowing the function of several Z
